Forget Grange, bring me Aussie steak: Donald Sutherland

When Sutherland showed little interest in the pricey red wine, his Australian flying acquaintances suggested he try one of Melbourne's best steak restaurants, Vlado's Charcoal Grill in Richmond.

"I remember I arrived at Vlado's very tired at six o'clock at night and there were these four men standing there in black uniforms," Sutherland, who was almost salivating, told a group of international journalists in the US while promoting his new film The Italian Job.

"I said 'May I see the menu?' and they brought me over a plate with four steaks on it.

"I said 'OK, I'll have that one' and I said 'What about vegetables?' and they said they didn't have any vegetables. I said 'Potatoes?' and they said 'No potatoes' and I said 'Salad?' and they said 'Well you can have this bit of lettuce and coleslaw and sausage' and that was it.

"Oh, I also had a strawberry pancake at the end.

"It was delicious, unbelievable."
